It's never too early to talk about self-advocacy and how to speak up when you need help, resources, or access to your accommodations. Join Sarah Robison, M.Ed. and a student panel to learn strategies that work and what advice current college students with disabilities wish they could have shared with themselves as middle schoolers.

Please RSVP to SRobison@experiencecle.com for our Zoom Link. Geared towards middle grades, our presentation will last for approximately 30 minutes with time afterwards for questions. As the Maryland Chapter of Learning Disabilities Association of America, we aim to serve students, families, and professionals, especially during this unusual time.
